EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This report examines the armed conflict between the United States/Israel and Iran that began on 28 February 2026. Analysis of available information, including over 6,324 unique incidents documented by Human Rights Activists in Iran (HRA) between 28 February and 8 April 2026, indicates that US and Israeli operations engaged a broad range of targets, including military installations and critical infrastructure. In numerous instances, strike effects extended beyond the target area, impacting residential structures, medical facilities, educational institutions, and cultural sites.

The frequency, geographic distribution, and diversity of impacted objects reflects a level of scale and intensity that renders this one of the most significant episodes of military activity within Iranian territory in recent years.

This report documents the destruction and examines the impact of hostilities on the civilian population, including their disproportionate effects on vulnerable groups. In parallel, patterns of increased domestic repression contributed to a convergence of harm affecting civilians. Developments within Iran, including heightened security measures, the expansion of checkpoints, increased security-related arrests, and restrictions on freedom of movement, compounded the impact of hostilities and intensified the overall harm experienced by Iranians during the period under review.

METHODOLOGY, SCOPE, LIMITATIONS

HRA relies on two primary, parallel workflows to document the scale of destruction and associated civilian harm.

First, HRA systematically collects open-source information, which is cross-checked against credible external reporting and corroborated through its established in-country network. Second, HRA receives direct reports from its network, which are independently verified through additional contacts or cross-referenced with open-source material. In all cases, inclusion requires corroboration from at least two independent sources, with consistency in key details such as time, location, and nature of the incident. The information presented in this report stems from 177 unique sources.

In parallel, HRA also collects and preserves official narratives and state-reported figures. These are maintained as a separate documentation stream and are not incorporated into verified casualty counts.

Throughout this report, witness and victim accounts are included. HRA maintains strict security protocols when engaging with individuals, ensuring that all communications prioritize safety, confidentiality, and informed consent.

The reporting period covers 28 February through the first day of the ceasefire, which began on 8 April Eastern Time, corresponding to 9 April in Iran. The 6,324 incidents, representing 12,798 unique attacks, documented by HRA during the reporting period reflect only those incidents that meet HRA's verification threshold. Within HRA's dataset, 77% of incidents involved civilian harm or damage to civilian objects. Recorded fatalities total 3,636, including 1,701 civilians, 1,221 military personnel, and 714 individuals whose identities and status could not be determined.

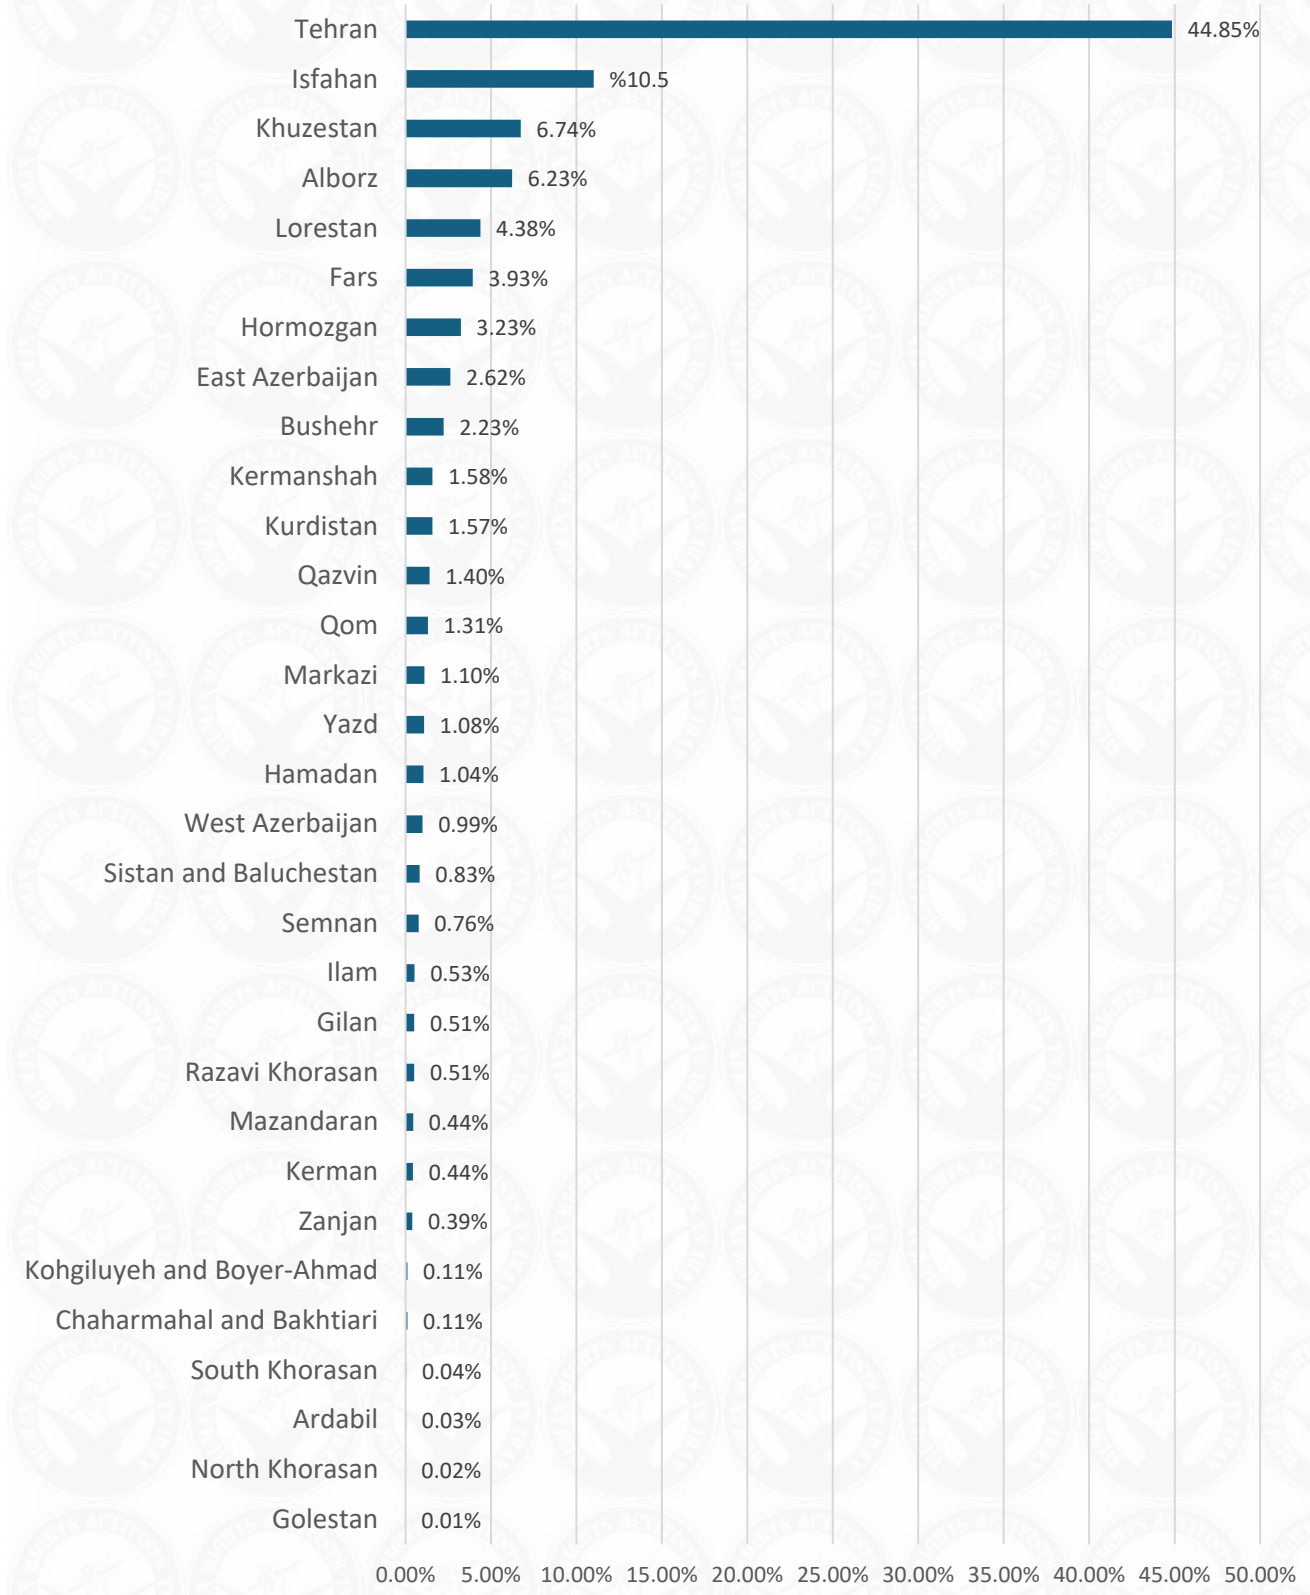

Geographically, 44.85% of recorded incidents occurred in Tehran province, followed by Isfahan (10.5%), Khuzestan (6.74%) and Alborz (6.23%).

Incident data and casualty figures represent absolute minimums and are indicative of documented impacts only; they do not capture all airstrikes or the full scope of harm. Figures are expected to increase over time as additional incidents are verified and connectivity is increased.

Documentation has been constrained by the absence of a transparent and centralized mechanism for information dissemination during the conflict. In the absence of coordinated official reporting, multiple institutions have released fragmented and, at times, inconsistent figures based on limited data.

Civil society organizations, journalists, and human rights groups have also faced constraints in accessing affected sites and collecting field-based evidence, reducing the availability of corroborated information. Internet disruptions have further compounded these challenges by restricting communication, limiting real-time reporting, and hindering documentation efforts.

DISTRIBUTION OF RECORDED INCIDENTS BY PROVINCE

LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE CONDUCT OF HOSTILITIES

As parties to an international armed conflict, the US, Israel and Iran are bound by obligations under international humanitarian law (IHL), also known as the law of armed conflict, in the conduct of hostilities.

The protection of civilians is a core obligation of IHL. Parties must at all times distinguish between civilian objects and military objectives – defined as objects which by their nature, location, purpose, or use make an effective contribution to military action and whose destruction or neutralization offers a definite military advantage. In case of doubt, an individual or object should be presumed to be civilian.

Attacks must be proportionate, meaning that those expected to cause incidental civilian harm that would be excessive in relation to the anticipated military advantage are prohibited. Parties must also take all feasible precautions to minimize foreseeable harm, including to verify targets, select appropriate weapons, adjust the attack timing to align with reduced civilian presence in the area, and provide effective advance warnings where circumstances permit.

Proportionality assessments should not only consider immediate effects but also the foreseeable indirect and long-term consequences. It places safeguards against attacks on objects or resources that civilians depend on to survive, or that risk causing widespread or long-term environmental harm. Protections extend beyond obvious civilian resources such as food and water supplies and agricultural areas to include interconnected infrastructure, such as electricity networks, oil facilities, and transport routes, when their destruction would disrupt access to basic needs and essential services.

Iran, as a defending party, is likewise required to protect civilians and civilian objects under its control from the effects of hostilities. Military objectives must not be located within or near densely populated areas, where the risk of incidental civilian harm is heightened. Civilian objects, including schools and hospitals, must not be used for military purposes. Defending forces are further required to take feasible precautions to protect civilians, including facilitating evacuations from areas of danger and, where appropriate, issuing effective warnings.

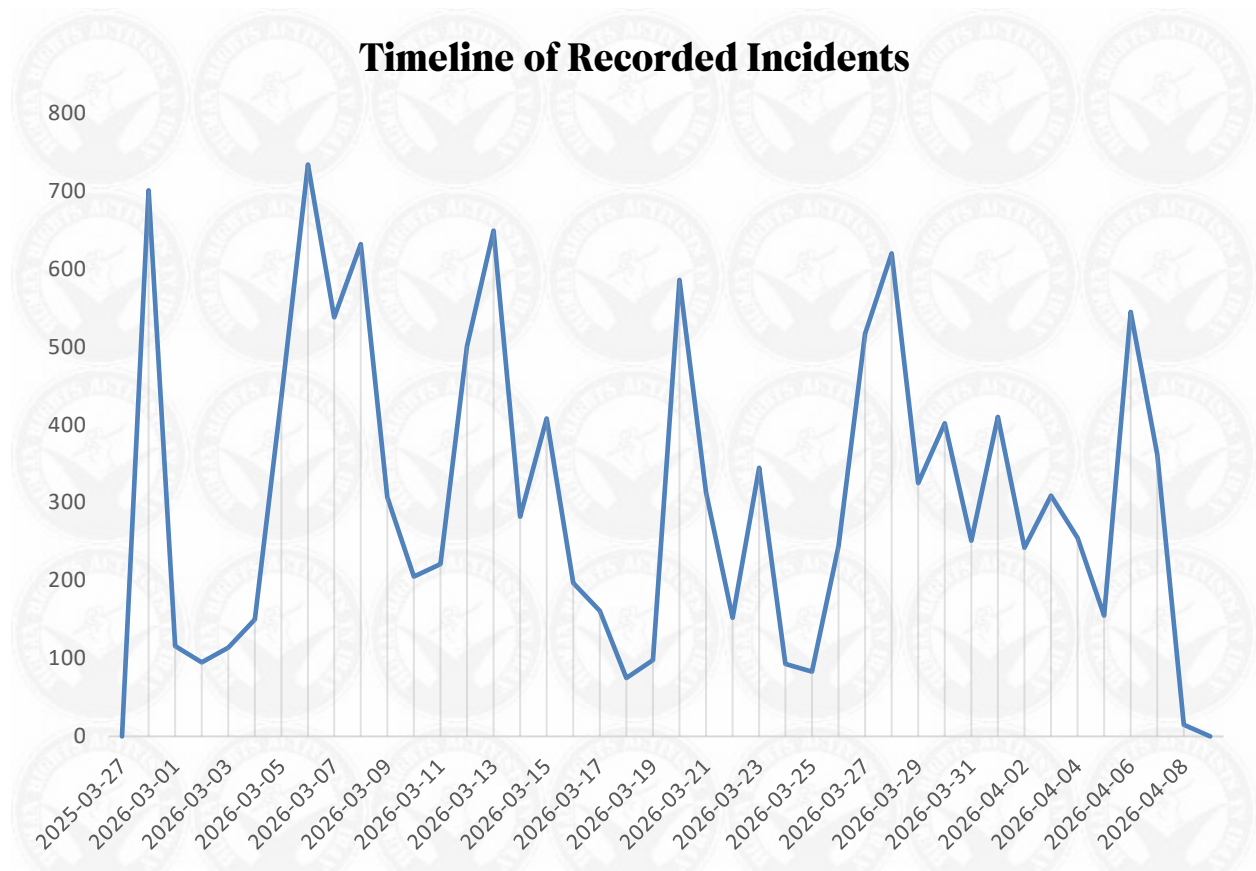

OPERATIONAL TRENDS

UNPRECEDENTED SCALE AND TEMPO OF ATTACKS

In the first 24 hours of hostilities, US forces reportedly struck over 1,000 targets in Iran and Israel hit an additional 750. By the end of the 38 days of combat, a total of 13,000 targets had been struck.

HRA documented 701 incidents on 28 February, the first day of airstrikes, including attacks affecting three different schools. The highest number of incidents recorded by HRA occurred on 6 March, with 734 documented incidents in a single day.

The pace and tempo, particularly in the opening days of the air campaign, were unprecedented. The US military reported that the first 24 hours involved double the firepower used during the opening day of the 2003 ‘shock and awe’ campaign in Iraq.

ATTACKS CARRIED OUT, BROKEN DOWN BY TIME OF OCCURRENCE (TEHRAN TIME)

PHASED STRATEGY

Publicly available information suggests that operations followed a coordinated, phased approach designed to minimize risk to attacking forces, increase precision, and establish operational superiority over the course of the conflict:

- Phase 1: Suppression of Enemy Air Defenses (SEAD/DEAD)
Use of loitering munitions, cyber operations, stealth drones, and cruise missiles to disable defense systems.
- Phase 2: Stand-off Precision Strikes
Execution of attacks using cruise missiles and guided munitions from a distance.
- Phase 3: Sustained Air Campaign
Successive waves of airstrikes using heavy and precision munitions following the degradation of air defenses.

WEAPONS PLATFORMS AND SYSTEMS

The US deployed aircraft carriers, destroyers, fighter aircraft, strategic bombers (B-1, B-2, and B-52), AWACS aircraft, aerial refueling platforms, and missile defense systems including Patriot and THAAD. Israel deployed fighter aircraft, including the F-35I, F-15 and F-16, and layered missile defense systems including Arrow and Iron Dome.

The campaign relied heavily on air-to-ground, high-explosive munitions, including long-range cruise missiles such as Tomahawk and JASSM, as well as guided bombs such as the GBU-31 JDAM and other MK-80 series bombs equipped with guidance kits. One-way attack ('suicide')drones were also used in early-stage targeting and suppression operations.

A detailed analysis of weapons is included in the annex of this report.

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE

The use of artificial intelligence-enabled systems stands out as one of the most significant technological developments in this conflict. Reports indicate that the US is using Palantir's "Maven" smart system, which incorporates Anthropic's Claude large language model. This system integrates multiple data sources, including satellite imagery, signals intelligence, and troop movements. In practice, such a system can identify potential targets, propose strike options, and significantly reduce the time between target detection and action.

The scale and tempo of operations observed in this conflict suggest that such systems may have contributed to the acceleration of targeting decisions. While speed may be perceived as an operational advantage from a military perspective, it is also associated with challenges related to data interpretation, accuracy, and the capacity for effective human oversight. Decisions are often based on complex and opaque processes that are difficult to independently assess, complicating the determination of responsibility in cases involving errors or civilian casualties.

CONDUCT OF HOSTILITIES

The documentation collected and reviewed by HRA indicates several patterns of concern in the conduct of hostilities and compliance with IHL.

DANGEROUS AND UNLAWFUL RHETORIC

Public statements by senior officials within the US administration reflect a concerning pattern of rhetoric that either contravenes legal standards or signals a disregard for them.

Statements throughout the US air campaign emphasizing operational speed and force suggested that precautionary measures to protect Iranian civilians may not have been adequately prioritized. In a widely circulated post, US President Donald Trump threatened to “hit and obliterate” Iranian power plants, a category of infrastructure indispensable to civilian survival. If operationalized, such attacks would likely violate core protections under IHL.

In a briefing on US operations against Iran, US Secretary of Defense Pete Hegseth dismissed “stupid rules of engagement” and stated that no mercy or quarter would be given to enemy combatants. Declarations of no quarter are themselves prohibited under the laws of war, as well as under US interpretations of the law according to the Department of Defense (DoD) Law of War Manual, as they disregard the basic premise to balance military necessity with humanity.

Finally, President Trump’s threat that “a whole civilization will die,” or calls for indiscriminate destruction, are unlawful insofar as they disregard the fundamental principle of distinction and signal an intent wholly incompatible with the protection of civilian life.

Statements by US leadership that reject or diminish constraints on the use of force undermine legal compliance and long-standing norms governing the conduct of warfare, and have dangerous implications for Iranian civilians.

MISIDENTIFICATION AND TARGETING ERRORS

Misidentification, meaning the incorrect assessment of a person or object as a military objective, is a frequent cause of civilian harm in warfare and reflects a failure of the duty to distinguish between civilian and military targets. Such errors can result from flawed, outdated, or incomplete intelligence, as well as from cognitive and operational pressures that limit effective scrutiny of targeting decisions.

The recurrence of incidents involving high civilian casualties suggests potential shortcomings in targeting practices, including intelligence assessment and target verification. The scale and intensity of operations may further increase the risk of such errors, particularly when it is AI-powered and where effective human oversight is reduced.

Preliminary findings indicate that the strike on the Minab girls' school (explored in detail in subsequent sections) may have been due to failures in target verification, including reliance on outdated intelligence. Evidence shows that the location had been clearly marked and identifiable as a school for several years prior to the attack injuring 110 others. The US denies responsibility for this attack, contrary to available evidence. And although the facility was located adjacent to an IRGC base, satellite imagery analysis found no clear damage to the base itself, raising further concerns regarding target identification.

INADEQUATE PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES

Providing effective advance warning of attacks that may affect civilians is a core precaution under IHL. Warnings should give civilians sufficient time and information to take protective measures and reduce their exposure to harm. In practice, warnings issued during this conflict have been limited in number, broad in scope, and insufficient to enable civilian protection.

When warnings were issued, they often covered large, densely populated areas without providing actionable information for evacuation. The US interpretation of the law has historically maintained that warnings need not be specific to time and place. Yet when delivered in such broad and generalized terms, they often leave civilians unable or unsure how to respond.

In other cases, warnings have been based on flawed or outdated data, further undermining their effectiveness. Conflicting messaging between the US and Israel has also been observed, with public statements advising civilians to remain indoors, while others advised evacuation.

Particularly problematic is the reliance on social media platforms such as X as the primary channel used by US Central Command (CENTCOM) and the Israeli Defence Forces (IDF) to disseminate warnings. Given the internet blackout in Iran and restrictions in access to X, Iranian civilians were effectively unable to access any warnings, regardless of their accuracy or utility.

USE OF EXPLOSIVE WEAPONS IN POPULATED AREAS

Most of the US-Israeli campaign in Iran involved the use of air-to-ground, high-explosive munitions. This includes some of the largest munitions in the conventional US military arsenal - the MK80 series, which includes 2000lb bombs, as well as JASSM and Tomahawk missiles, which can each hit targets hundreds of miles away with large ‘bunker-buster’ warheads (see the Weapons Annex for more detail). Available data indicate that the location of US and Israeli strikes overlaps with areas of highest population density in Iran. Tehran Province alone accounted for 45% of total incidents verified by HRA across the span of the conflict.

The use of high-powered munitions caused damage to adjacent locations in addition to destroying the primary target. ©HRA

While explosive weapons are not prohibited in warfare, their use is subject to constraints meant to balance military necessity with humanity. In densely populated areas, distinguishing between military targets and civilians, many of whom are unable or unwilling to evacuate, poses unique challenges for the protection of civilians. Risks are further elevated when explosive weapons are inherently imprecise or have wide-area effects. The foreseeable potential for civilian death and injury is high, as well as damage to critical civilian infrastructure such as water, electricity, transport networks, and other basic services.

These effects may extend beyond the immediate impact of strikes, including long-term displacement, contamination from explosive remnants of war, and prolonged disruption to basic services. Such reverberating effects must be considered in assessing the lawfulness of attacks.

ATTACKS ON CIVILIAN AND DUAL USE INFRASTRUCTURE

Beyond devastating civilian casualties, the US and Israeli airstrikes caused extensive damage to civilian objects in Iran. Official statistics estimate that over 100,000 residential buildings were damaged. As documented throughout this report, HRA verified damage to 108 education facilities, 50 healthcare facilities, 122 cultural heritage and religious sites, and 381 industrial and commercial facilities. Certain civilian objects that were targeted are essential for civilian survival, including water treatment plants and energy infrastructure, and their damage or destruction will have long-term consequences for the health and welfare of Iranians.

In numerous cases, civilian objects were used, or were purported by the US or Israel to be used, for military purposes - including education, medical or sports facilities. In these cases, an attack carries an escalated likelihood of causing civilian harm if civilians continue to use or occupy the space, as well as cascading harm due to the destruction of the object that served the civilian population.

On April 2, the Pasteur Institute, Iran's leading public health research facility that develops vaccines and essential medicines for civilian use was attacked on the military justification that such research contributes to biological weapons development. On April 3, the Laser and Plasma Research Institute of Shahid Beheshti University, a prominent educational and health research laboratory, was destroyed. Israel publicly justified strikes on civilian medical, pharmaceutical, or research-linked facilities on allegations of military function, including claims relating to chemical weapons-linked activity.

An object's dual-use by civilians as well as the military does not remove constraints from attacking it. Even if a civilian object becomes a lawful military objective, proportionality assessments must account for the foreseeable impact on civilian populations, including the long-term, reverberating effects, such as displacement and public health consequences.

REPEATED OR DOUBLE TAP STRIKES

"Double tap" strikes refer to instances when a second, or multiple, strikes follow an initial attack within a short timeframe. Patterns of such conduct seen in Iran expose civilians and emergency responders to heightened risk, particularly when they have responded to the first strike to assist the wounded or assess damage.

An attack on 1 March on Niloufar Square in Tehran involved a second strike while civilians and relief workers were responding to the first strike, killing twenty civilians. HRA verified an attack of at least two airstrikes involving seven missiles on the Bilqan B1 bridge in Karaj on 2 April, during a holiday when civilians were outside picnicking nearby.

These patterns raise serious concerns regarding compliance with the principles of proportionality, and precautions in attack, as well as obligations to protect the wounded and those providing assistance. Even where a military objective is lawfully identified, the repeated use of munitions in the same location within a short timeframe becomes increasingly difficult to justify as the anticipated military advantage diminishes while the risk of civilian harm increases.

FAILURE BY THE DEFENDING PARTY (IRAN) TO PROTECT CIVILIANS

Evidence reviewed by HRA indicates several areas of concern regarding Iran's compliance with its obligations as a defending party to protect civilians.

Iranian armed forces have reportedly co-located military activities and infrastructure within, or in close proximity, to civilian objects, including children's sports venues and schools. Such practices increase the risk of incidental harm to civilians, of rendering civilian objects the target of attack, and raise concerns regarding the obligation, to the extent feasible, to avoid locating military objectives within densely populated areas.

Defending parties are prohibited from using civilians to shield military objectives from attack. In response to US threats to attack power plants, Iranian officials encouraged civilians, including children and students, to form human chains around infrastructure sites to deter strikes.

On 26 March, the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) announced a recruitment campaign encouraging children as young as 12 to join and ‘help the defenders of the homeland’. HRA documented an increased presence of children at Basij checkpoints and in support roles. Even where such involvement appears voluntary, the participation of children under the age of 18 is considered coercive under international law, given a child’s inability to provide full, free, and informed consent. The recruitment and use of children under 15 in hostilities is prohibited under IHL.

Evidence further indicates a failure to take feasible precautions to protect civilians from the effects of hostilities. Civilians seeking to flee affected areas reportedly received no evacuation support and, in some cases, were even impeded at Basij checkpoints. There is no indication that any type of warning system, such as air raid sirens, were implemented.

One Tehran resident described the experience as follows:

“There was no warning at all. We only realized something had happened when we heard explosions. We didn’t know where it was safe, or even what we were supposed to do.”

Another citizen highlighted the lack of shelters:

“When the sounds started, the only thing we could do was stay away from windows. There was nowhere we knew was actually safe.”

Violations by the defending party do not absolve attacking forces of their own obligations under international humanitarian law.

TARGETED INFRASTRUCTURE

The examples provided in the following sections are illustrative and do not constitute a comprehensive account of the impact.

MILITARY BASES AND FACILITIES

The US reported striking 13,000 targets in Iran. HRA independently verified damage to at least 552 military or paramilitary sites between 28 February and 8 April.

Strikes were directed at military infrastructure across multiple levels, including command and control centers to operational bases, air defense systems, and missile facilities.

Command and Control Centers

Several high-level command and control facilities were targeted, including:

- General Staff headquarters
- Army Joint Staff
- IRGC headquarters, including:
 - Tharallah
 - Hamzeh Seyyed al-Shohada
 - Beit al-Moqaddas

These facilities play a central role in directing operations and coordinating forces. Their targeting suggests efforts to disrupt command structures and reduce operational cohesion. Intelligence centers and elements of security structures were also targeted, indicating a parallel focus on weakening intelligence capabilities.

Airbases and Military Installations

A wide range of bases and garrisons across the country were struck, including:

- Major airbases: Doshan Tappeh
- Tactical airbases: Fakouri, Babaei, and Vahdati
- Military installations and garrisons: Imam Ali, Ashura, Boroujerdi, and various IRGC units.

These centers are critical for troop deployment, training, and logistical support, and damage to them contributed to reduced operational capacity on the ground.

Aviation and Naval Infrastructure

Attacks targeted fighter bases and aviation facilities, including:

- Aviation sites: Bandar Abbas, Bushehr, Shiraz, Isfahan.
- Naval infrastructure:
 - Bushehr naval base
 - Facilities in Konarak
 - IRGC naval infrastructure along the southern coasts
 - Vessels and patrol boats

These strikes affected infrastructure related to troop mobility, air support, tactical and maritime operations in strategic areas, limiting parts of the forces' mobility and support capabilities.

Missile, Drone and Air Defense Systems

A prominent pattern was the extensive targeting of missile and air defense infrastructure, including:

- Missile and drone launch sites and launch platforms
- Ammunition and drone storage facilities
- Underground ballistic missile production and storage facilities
- Air defense systems and radar sites
- Anti-aircraft bases

This combination of targets demonstrates that reducing missile capabilities and degrading defensive systems were among the central objectives of the air campaign.

Ground Forces

At the level of ground forces and broader military structures, targets included:

- 39 Basij bases
- 20 IRGC regional, district- and country-level facilities
- 24 security and intelligence offices

The geographic dispersion of these attacks indicates that the focus was not limited to major centers but extended to a wider network of military infrastructure at local levels. This pattern contributed to weakening field presence and reducing regional control capacity.

POLICE STATIONS AND CHECKPOINTS

HRA documented and verified incidents affecting at least 191 judicial and law enforcement facilities between 28 February and 8 April. These included 116 police stations, 9 criminal investigation units, 9 border police facilities, 12 courthouses, 2 prisons and 43 checkpoints.

Examples of law enforcement facilities that were affected include:

- Law Enforcement Command Headquarters in Tehran, Urmia, Sanandaj, Saqqez, Gilan-e Gharb, Khermanshah, Zarrin Shahr, Mobarakeh, Ajab Shir, and Hamedan
- Internal Security Command Headquarters (FARAJA HQ) in Tehran and Ilam
- Border Guard Command Headquarters (FARAJA), unspecified southern region
- Prevention Police Facility near Enghelab Square, Tehran
- Cyber Police (FATA) Office, Paveh
- Police Precinct 104 (Niloufar Square Investigation Unit), Tehran
- Police Precinct 137 (Gisha Moral Security Police), Tehran
- Police Precinct 12 (Public Security and FATA Unit), Tehran
- Police Station (Edinan Post), western region
- Police Station (Senteh Post), Kurdistan region

The following Basij-controlled checkpoint locations were also affected, primarily in Tehran, with verified reports indicating the presence of children in some incidents:

- Tehran: Artesh Highway, Valiasr Square, Shoosh, Shariati Street, Afsariyeh Junction, Khavaran, Pirouzi Street (IRGC), Haft Tir Square, Shahid Mahallati neighborhood
- Shiraz: Amir Kabir Boulevard

Checkpoint sites function as nodes of state control, where residents are subjected to vehicle searches, phone inspections, questioning, and the risk of arrest. While these locations may be associated with security operations, they are often embedded within densely populated civilian areas and involve constant interaction with the civilian population.

Basij checkpoints in particular have imposed significant restrictions on movement, creating severe traffic congestion within cities and along major exit routes. At any given time, these areas are characterized by the presence of large numbers of civilians, including drivers, passengers, and pedestrians.

Attacks on such locations, even when directed at a specific target, carry a foreseeable risk of civilian harm. HRA verified 44 casualties, including 13 deaths, from attacks on checkpoints. Video evidence indicates that several strikes occurred during daylight hours, when civilian presence was high, with passenger vehicles and pedestrians clearly visible in the vicinity.

RESIDENTIAL AREAS

The Iranian Red Crescent Society estimates that around 100,000 residential units were damaged during the war. HRA verified 689 incidents involving damage to residential buildings and areas, including single-family homes, apartment complexes and mixed-use residential and commercial properties, representing approximately 27% of all categorized targets (35% of civilian-object targets).

Notable examples of the damage and destruction of homes include:

- Two 20-unit buildings in the Resalat area of eastern Tehran were struck on 9 March, resulting in the death of 40 civilians.
- The Narenjestan residential complex in Amin Town, Arak was struck on 13 March, injuring 35 civilians and killing two.

A residential building that was targeted in airstrikes ©HRA

- A multi-story building in the Velenjak area of Tehran was struck on 18 March and completely destroyed, killing a 22-year old Kurdish woman.

HRA also found that 43% of recorded incidents occurred at night, between 20:00 and 04:00, when civilians are most likely to be home. Some attacks resulted in the deaths of entire families. In one incident in a rural village in Khorramabad, Lorestan Province on 10 March, a residential home was hit and four members of the same family were killed, including a grandmother, mother, and two children. On 23 March, the body of a one-year-old child was recovered from the rubble of a residential home in Tabriz and four members of the child's family were also killed. In an attack on a residential building in Eyvan, Ilam Province, on 14 March, six members of a family were killed, including a five-year-old child and six-month-old infant.

Available reporting indicates that even where a specific facility or individual was identified as the intended target, the effects of strikes frequently extended into surrounding residential areas. For example, an attack on the Fardis oil depot in Karaj, Alborz Province on 7 March damaged approximately 100 nearby residential and commercial units, two schools, and resulted in a fire that led to the destruction of a nearby dialysis center.

In some instances, the scale of casualties and damage appears to have been exacerbated by factors such as aging infrastructure and high population density. The destruction of homes also resulted in internal displacement, loss of property, and psychological harm, as discussed further below.

MEDICAL CENTERS AND HEALTHCARE PERSONNEL

The Iranian Red Crescent Society (IRCS) reported damage to over 334 healthcare facilities across Iran. HRA independently documented and verified attacks affecting 50 medical facilities between 28 February and 8 April.

Healthcare infrastructure across multiple regions sustained widespread damage, including major urban hospitals, emergency medical bases, clinics, pharmaceutical centers and comprehensive healthcare centers. In some cases, this resulted in the complete loss of functionality of affected facilities.

HRA verified damage to the following medical infrastructure (non-exhaustive).

- 21 hospitals, including Khatam al-Anbia Hospital, Motahari Hospital, Gandhi Hospital, and Taleghani Hospital.
- 12 specialized medical facilities, including surgical centers, clinics, outpatient facilities, and the Dr. Sapir Hospital and Charity Center in Tehran.
- 8 emergency medical bases (54 total reported affected by IRCS)
- 8 Iranian Red Crescent bases
- 1 blood transfusion center

HRA verified the deaths of 15 healthcare workers during the conflict. On 5 March, three medical workers were killed in one attack on the emergency medical base in Zibashahr, Shiraz.

The consequences extend beyond the physical destruction of medical facilities and deeply impact the access to medical treatment and emergency services. These impacts are likely to be long-lasting. At a time when demand for medical services has increased due to conflict-related injuries and conditions, damage to this infrastructure places additional strain on the civilian population and significantly limits access to essential care.

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

The Iranian Red Crescent reported damage to 763 schools in Iran, reflecting the scale of impact on the education system. HRA independently documented and verified attacks affecting 108 educational facilities between 28 February and 8 April.

The human consequences of these attacks are particularly severe for children and students. HRA verified the deaths of 307 children in US and Israeli attacks. On 28 February, the first day of hostilities, HRA recorded attacks that directly targeted or affected at least three different schools across Iran and killing and injuring children while in educational settings. The most severe incident was an attack on the “Shajareh Tayyebah” girls’ school in Minab, which Iranian officials reported resulted in the deaths of at least 120 students. In Lamerd, an attack on a sports hall and adjacent elementary school killed another 21 civilians, including three children. Finally, on the same day in Abyek, Qazvin Province, a nearby airstrike killed one student, shattered the school windows and sent teachers and students running for cover.

Additional schools were damaged, either directly or by nearby attacks throughout the conflict, including: Imam Reza, Shahid Mahalati, Allameh Helli, Shahid Hamedani, Payambar Azam, Sayyah Moghadam, and Golhaye Enghelab schools, as well as several girls’ high schools, including Esmat in Urmia, Narjes in Kahrizak, and Nemouneh Dowlaty Hejab.

Extensive destruction of the Iran Space Research Center following airstrikes ©HRA

At the higher education level, 61 universities were affected, including: University of Tehran, Sharif University of Technology, Shahid Beheshti University, Iran University of Science and Technology, and Tarbiat Modares University.

The consequences of these attacks extend beyond physical destruction. The loss of children's lives, exposure to violence and potentially traumatic events, and the disruption of access to education and safe learning environments represent significant and potentially long-term impacts on children and students.

CULTURAL AND RELIGIOUS SITES

HRA verified damage to at least 122 cultural and religious sites that were affected by attacks between 28 February and 8 April. This includes 12 places of worship, 11 museums, 4 cultural centers, 2 cinemas, 2 libraries, and 91 historical monuments and heritage sites.

The highest level of damage to cultural heritage sites occurred in Tehran, followed by Isfahan and Kurdistan provinces. A significant portion of this damage did not result from direct strikes, but rather from blast waves and ground vibrations caused by nearby airstrikes, including the following notable examples:

- Golestan Palace in Tehran, a UNESCO World Heritage Site, sustained significant damage on 1 March.
- Falak-ol-Aflak Castle in Khorramabad, Lorestan, an ancient fortress and historical landmark dating back to the Sassanid Empire was damaged. The same attack destroyed Lorestan's Cultural Heritage office building.

- Reshk Palace in Isfahan, a Safavid-era structure, was completely destroyed in attacks on 12 March that also damaged nearby UNESCO-listed Chehel Sotoun Palace.
- Saadabad Palace in Tehran was damaged by nearby explosions on 17 March.

Global cultural heritage organizations have warned that hostilities risk causing irreversible damage to cultural heritage sites.

INFRASTRUCTURE ESSENTIAL TO CIVILIAN LIFE

Alongside industrial and production units, a significant range of infrastructure essential to civilian life, including energy, electricity, and water systems, was also targeted. These systems are critical to the functioning of civilian life, and damage to them has wide-reaching and cascading effects.

Energy Infrastructure

Attacks were recorded affecting 21 oil storage facilities and 20 refineries, including:

- Oil depots in Shahrān and Aghdasieh (Tehran)
- Fuel storage facilities, including airport storage in Qeshm, Bandar Lengeh, Kerman
- Rey refinery
- Oil installations in South Pars and Asaluyeh

Damage to these sites disrupts fuel supply, distribution networks and the functioning of dependent industries.

ELECTRICITY SYSTEMS

HRA documented damage to 173 sites related to electricity generation and distribution, including:

- Dozens of power substations in Tehran
- Parts of the electricity distribution network
- Power plants in Bandar Abbas (Geno and combined-cycle plants)
- Infrastructure associated with MAPNA power plants and regional power grids

These attacks have resulted in power outages across both urban and rural areas. Beyond immediate disruptions, such outages can paralyze essential services, including hospitals, water supply systems, and industrial operations.

WATER INFRASTRUCTURE

Water systems were also targeted, including the following cases documented by HRA:

- The Khomein water reservoir was hit on the evening of 6 March, resulting in a citywide water outage.
- One of the desalination plants on Qeshm Island was attacked on 6 March.
- A desalination facility located near the Nikshahr junction and the new Tis town on the coast of the Oman Sea was targeted on 15 March.
- The 10,000-cubic-meter water reservoir of Haftgel city in Khuzestan Province was attacked on 28 March.

The US President publicly warned that the United States could potentially “blow up and completely [obliterate] all desalination plants.” These facilities—particularly in water-scarce regions—are essential for providing potable water. Damage to them can lead to immediate disruptions in access to safe water and pose serious public health risks, especially where rapid replacement is not feasible.

SUPPORTING INFRASTRUCTURE

Attacks also affected supporting infrastructure, including:

- 5 gas administration facilities
- 9 telecommunications systems infrastructure
- 28 roads, highways, toll stations

While such infrastructure may not directly produce energy, it is essential for the stable functioning of systems on which civilians rely.

The combination of these attacks reveal a concerning pattern of simultaneous disruption across multiple layers of critical infrastructure. Power outages can disrupt water systems; fuel shortages can paralyze transportation and supply chains; and water disruptions can lead to public health crises. The impact of these attacks rapidly extends beyond infrastructure damage and affects the daily lives and resilience of millions of people, with potential longer-term consequences for public health, food security, and economic stability.

INDUSTRIES AND SUPPLY CHAINS

HRA documented and verified damage to 381 industrial sites as a result of attacks between 28 February and 8 April.

Analysis of recorded incidents indicates that a significant number of production units, industrial zones, workshops, and vital industries were affected. The impacts extend beyond physical damage and have broader economic and human consequences.

A number of workers were killed or injured as a result of these attacks. An attack on 4 March in the Alborz Industrial City in Qazvin resulted in 23 injured civilians. A 14 March attack on a factory for cooling and heating equipment in the Ji Industrial Park in Isfahan killed 15 civilians and injured several more workers.

Many more civilians lost their jobs due to the destruction of their workplaces. In some cases, small workshops and units lacking insurance or sufficient support were completely removed from the production cycle. This situation, in addition to increasing unemployment rates, places additional economic pressure on working-class households.

Overall, the observed pattern shows that attacks on Iran's industries, whether direct or through damage to supporting infrastructure, have weakened production capacity, disrupted supply chains, increased economic vulnerability, and intensified livelihood crises. These impacts, particularly in wartime conditions, can produce cumulative and long-term effects on the national economy and the daily lives of citizens.

INDUSTRIAL ZONES AND PRODUCTION CLUSTERS

HRA documented attacks on 22 industrial zones, including:

- Esteghlal
- Kaveh
- Shokouhiyeh
- Parand
- Caspian
- Nazarabad
- Bu Ali Hamadan industrial parks

These areas function as production hubs, hosting dozens to hundreds of small and medium-sized enterprises operating in sectors such as parts manufacturing, food industries, chemicals, and consumer goods. Targeting these zones, even when only a limited number of units are directly hit, can disrupt interconnected production chains, leading to widespread interruptions in manufacturing and distribution. Reports also indicate the destruction or damage of dozens of production units within these areas, in some cases resulting in the complete cessation of operations and worker unemployment.

FACTORIES AND INDUSTRIAL FACILITIES

HRA documented attacks on 63 factories and 151 small production facilities, including:

- Saba Battery in Qom
- Polymer industry facilities
- Starch production plants
- Heating and cooling equipment manufacturers
- Production companies in Qazvin and Tabriz

These facilities are largely civilian in nature and supply essential goods for daily life. Damage to such industries not only reduces domestic production capacity but also increases market pressure, raises prices, and heightens dependence on imports.

ESSENTIAL GOODS AND SUPPLY CHAINS

In some instances, critical infrastructure linked to healthcare and the supply of essential goods has also been affected, including:

- A storage facility for medications for special patients and infant formula in Bu Ali Industrial Park in Hamadan
- Abidi Pharmaceutical Company

Such incidents can disrupt access to medicines for patients and essential nutrition for children, leading to both immediate and long-term humanitarian consequences.

LOGISTICS INFRASTRUCTURE

Logistics and industrial transportation infrastructure were impacted, including 51 airports, 15 seaports/harbors, 12 piers/docks, 2 border terminals, and 3 cargo terminals, such as:

- Jask Port freight terminal, Chazabeh border terminal, Yazd freight terminal, and Saba freight terminal in Zanjan.
- Konarak Customs, Anzali Customs, Bandar Lengeh Customs, Bandar Deylam Customs, and Shalamcheh Customs facilities.

- Shahid Beheshti Port (Chabahar), Bahonar Pier in Bandar Abbas, Haqqani Pier in Bandar Abbas, Bandar-e Charak Pier, Soru Pier, the commercial pier of Bandar Lengeh, passenger and fishing piers of Bushehr, Bahman Pier on Qeshm Island, Doha fishing pier on Qeshm Island, Kalantari Pier, Jask fishing pier, and Pasabandar Pier.

Disruptions to these systems affect both import and export flows, as well as the supply of raw materials needed by domestic industries, potentially leading to further production stoppages.

HUMAN AND SOCIAL IMPACTS AMID ARMED CONFLICT AND ESCALATING DOMESTIC REPRESSION

The United Nations Independent International Fact-Finding Mission (FFMI) on Iran warned in early March that Iranian civilians were caught between the harm resulting from external military operations and ongoing domestic rights violations. Evidence indicates that the escalation of hostilities with the US and Israel coincided with intensified repression by Iran. This follows in the wake of brutal violence against anti-regime protesters in January 2026, which HRA found likely amounted to crimes against humanity, as reported in The Crimson Winter: A 50 Day Record of Iran’s 2025–2026 Nationwide Protests.

International human rights law continues to apply during armed conflict, and Iran remains bound by its obligations under core human rights treaties, such as the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as well as customary international law. At the same time, under international humanitarian law, Iran is obligated to take all feasible precautions to protect civilians and civilian objects under its control from the effects of hostilities. This concept is explored in the above section regarding the Duty of the Defending Party. These parallel frameworks operate concurrently, reinforcing the prohibition of arbitrary harm and the duty to protect civilians in all circumstances.

ESCALATING REPRESSION AMIDST ARMED CONFLICT

In line with patterns seen during previous periods of unrest and insecurity, Iranian authorities have used the conflict to intensify national-security narratives and justify arrests, restrictions on freedom of expression, and violence against civilians. Between February 28 and May 9, HRA documented at least 4,023 arrests on allegations such as espionage, threats to national security, or communicating or sharing content related to the conflict with foreign media. The situation for arrests is ongoing at the time of writing.

A list of individuals detained as a result of increased security related arrests is in Annex 3.

Senior regime officials publicly framed any protest activity as collaboration with foreign enemies. Mass text messages warned Iranians not to take to the streets. In a televised statement, the national police chief declared that anyone who took to the streets “at the enemy’s request” would be treated as an enemy and stated that security forces were prepared to use lethal force. The Intelligence Organization of the IRGC similarly threatened that individuals labelled as “rioters” would face the same treatment imposed during recent protest crackdowns.

Public statements by judicial authorities reinforced that legal action may even be pursued against Iranians living abroad, accused of cooperating with foreign governments, including the potential confiscation of assets. Within Iran, officials suggested that the financial costs of the war could be offset through the seizure of assets belonging to individuals deemed to have violated national-security laws.

WORSENING SITUATION FOR DETAINEES

According to HRA documentation, 2 prisons were targeted or damaged as a result of nearby attacks between 28 February and 8 April.

Conditions inside Iran’s detention facilities deteriorated after the escalation of hostilities. Field documentation conducted by HRA found severe overcrowding, with many prisoners forced to sleep on the floor in cells, corridors, and prayer rooms. Detainees face reduced access to food, clean water, medical care, and basic movement within facilities. Rising prices have made essential goods unaffordable for many incarcerated individuals.

In Khorramabad Prison, one source told HRA that daily meals were reduced to two limited rations, with both the quantity and quality of food significantly declining since the start of the conflict. In Greater Tehran Prison, the transfer of large numbers of detainees, including individuals arrested during the January nationwide protests, has created acute space shortages, further straining already fragile living conditions.

Communication restrictions, including reduced phone access and limited visits, increased psychological strain and deepened isolation. At the same time, heightened security measures and the involvement of special forces led to stricter conditions and rising tensions, including reports of protests and hunger strikes.

Detainees face additional risk of torture, ill-treatment, and enforced disappearances alongside the risk of expedited death penalty proceedings, in violation of the right to due process and the right to life, with even more limited visibility or legal recourse.

At the time of writing, the rate of executions has escalated significantly, particularly in cases involving political and security related charges. Between February 28 and 13 May, 50 executions have been carried out, including 32 individuals executed on political and security related grounds alone. A substantial number of these cases have been directly connected to arrests made in the aftermath of the January 2026 protests, raising serious concerns regarding the use of capital punishment as a tool of repression against individuals associated with protest activity or perceived political dissent.

Among the detainees across Iran are students, human rights defenders, and civilians who were arbitrarily detained during recent nationwide protests on a scale that the UN Fact-Finding Mission found may have amounted to a crime against humanity. For thousands of families, the war intensified the fear and uncertainty for loved ones who are arbitrarily deprived of physical liberty and are trapped in facilities with little protection from violence.

‘The Zarrin Shahr prison where I was held was next to the courthouse. I don’t know if the courthouse or the prison was the target, but either way we heard massive explosions while we were stuck in halls with the doors locked. I heard some of the prison staff were injured and part of the outer wall collapsed. We were trapped and could only hear explosions and gunfire, thinking any moment we might die while the doors were locked.’ - former detainee

In addition to officially recognized detention facilities, Iran is known to detain civilians at undisclosed “black sites,” in locations such as residential buildings, airports, and hotels. Armed conflict exacerbates challenges for relatives, lawyers, and monitoring groups to determine their whereabouts. It also increases the risk that airstrikes inadvertently impact these unofficial detention locations and harm arbitrarily detained civilians.

INTERNET AND COMMUNICATIONS BLACKOUT

On March 19, the nationwide internet shutdown imposed since late February became the longest recorded communications blackout in Iran's history, reducing connectivity to one percent of normal levels. It also became the longest sustained shutdown in a highly connected society globally, based on tracking by the independent internet monitor, NetBlocks. At the time of writing the blackout continues.

Authorities justify these measures on national security grounds and have acknowledged the intent to amplify the voice of authorities, effectively silencing dissent. It follows a familiar pattern during times of crisis. In January, Iran imposed a lengthy shutdown while it killed at least 7,007 protesters and arrested at least 53,777 more. Based on experience in Iran and globally, such blackouts coincide with upticks in repression and violence against civilians.

Amidst the armed conflict, the internet shutdown isolated Iranians from one another and heightened their exposure to harm. Civilians were unable to access information about security risks, including airstrike warnings, evacuation options, the safety of their loved ones, and where to access humanitarian assistance. First responders and medical personnel were impeded from coordinating emergency relief.

A small proportion of US and Israeli attacks were preceded by warnings posted on the social media platform X. However, civilians were unable to receive them due to the communications restrictions (see section above on Inadequate Precautionary Warnings). Even under normal conditions, access to platforms such as X is blocked by domestic censorship and approximately 70–90 percent of Iranian internet users rely on virtual private networks (VPNs).

One Tehran resident described the situation as follows: “Even if there were warnings, we didn’t see them. The internet was either down or so slow that nothing would load. And even if we had seen them, where were we supposed to go?”

Some Iranians have attempted to circumvent the internet shutdown through satellite internet systems such as Starlink, but doing so carries significant risk. Iranian authorities criminalized the possession or use of Starlink systems, and intelligence officials warned that wartime use warrants the “harshest punishments,” including execution on espionage-related charges.

Beyond immediate safety concerns, the shutdown carries severe economic consequences. NetBlocks estimates that each day of an internet shutdown in Iran costs the country over \$37 million; by April 16, cumulative losses were estimated at \$1.8 billion. These losses result from disruptions to trade, services, and productivity. An estimated 10 million people rely on Iran’s digital commerce market. The long-term impact on investments and livelihoods will further compound the already dire economic situation of Iran before the conflict.

Internet shutdowns engage a wide range of human rights protections, including the rights to freedom of expression, access to information, association, assembly, and health, among others. Security-related restrictions on communication must be provided for by law and be strictly necessary and proportionate to the specific security concern being addressed. A blanket shutdown, given the widespread and indiscriminate impact, would fail such a proportionality test and could never be justified under human rights law, according to UN human rights experts.

Finally, the communications blackout increases the risk that civilian harm and domestic repression remain hidden from scrutiny. By restricting the capacity for independent reporting, documentation, and monitoring, prolonged shutdowns create conditions in which atrocities can occur with reduced visibility and accountability.

RESTRICTED FREEDOM OF MOVEMENT

Reports of expanded checkpoints, surveillance measures, and threats related to movement further limited civilians’ ability to reach safer areas during hostilities. Across Tehran, newly established Basij checkpoints have subjected residents to vehicle and phone searches, questioning, and the risk of arrest. These controls create severe traffic congestion within the city and on major exit routes, and can effectively trap civilians when they are trying to flee hostilities.

Checkpoint congestion also created new security risks. HRA verified attacks on at least 43 checkpoints by US and Israeli airstrikes, resulting in at least 13 civilian deaths. Video evidence indicates that several strikes occurred in daylight hours while passenger vehicles and pedestrians were clearly present in large numbers. In response, authorities reportedly relocated some checkpoints beneath pedestrian overpasses or inside road tunnels in an attempt to reduce exposure to drone attacks.

One nurse in Tehran described the dilemma many families faced:

In these conditions, I want to do my job. I just wanted to take my two children somewhere safe, so I could have peace of mind. I tried twice to leave Tehran but had to turn back. The first time was because of a bombing that closed the roads in eastern Tehran. My second attempt was at the same time as the explosions at the oil facilities that led to toxic rain in the air, and I had to turn back. Finally, on the third attempt, after ten days, I finally got my children out of Tehran. I returned to the hospital and now sleep there with other medical staff because it is no longer safe to go home.

Alongside physical restrictions, residents reported receiving text messages warning them not to gather or move in public spaces, reinforcing a climate of fear that further limits freedom of movement during an already dangerous period.

While certain security controls may be permissible in emergency situations, international human rights law requires that any restrictions on movement remain strictly necessary, proportionate, and non-discriminatory. Where such measures prevent civilians from leaving high-risk areas or accessing safety, they may contribute to avoidable harm and furthermore undermine Iran's obligations under international humanitarian law. As a defending party, Iran is required, to the maximum extent feasible, to facilitate the movement of civilians away from the vicinity of military objectives and areas of active hostilities, and to take all necessary measures to ensure their protection.

INTERNAL DISPLACEMENT

According to United Nations reporting, approximately 100,000 people were displaced within the first two days of the conflict, with subsequent estimates indicating that up to 3.2 million individuals are internally displaced across the country. Vulnerable groups, including the estimated 1.65 million mostly Afghan refugees hosted by Iran, faced heightened risks due to limited access to services and support networks.

Displacement is concentrated in major urban centers, particularly Tehran, with many residents relocating to northern and rural areas perceived as safer. This movement places significant strain on infrastructure in host communities, leading to shortages in housing, food, and healthcare, and contributing to overcrowded living conditions.

The large extent of residential property damage (reported on above) has led to repurposing of facilities like schools and dormitories into temporary shelters. Municipal officials in Tehran moved over 3,000 residents into twelve hotels across the city.

A residential building that was targeted in airstrikes ©HRA

Even where displacement is short-term or temporary, it imposes substantial human and economic costs, particularly for Iran's poorest households. Thirty nine percent of the labor market are informal workers whose livelihoods depend on continuous economic activity. They are often engaged in small enterprises and self-employment activities that are highly sensitive to disruptions in mobility and demand.

Beyond immediate impacts, displacement has longer-term consequences, including disruptions to livelihoods, education, and access to basic services, as well as lasting psychological and economic effects.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMIC IMPACT AND LOSS OF PURCHASING POWER

The primary economic impact of the conflict has been a sharp decline in household purchasing power, rather than widespread shortages of goods. While some disruptions to supply were reported, in many cases essential items remained available but were no longer affordable for a significant portion of the population.

Temporary bank closures and disruptions to financial services further limited access to cash, compounding these constraints. As one citizen described it:

“The problem is not that goods are unavailable; the problem is that people do not have the money to buy them.”

Pre-existing macroeconomic fragility and high inflation – estimated at over 50 percent before the war – was further exacerbated by the conflict. Disruptions to imports, supply chains, and transportation increased costs and contributed to rapid price increases, particularly for essential goods. Reports indicate frequent, and in some cases, daily price fluctuations. The poorest households in Iran already spend around 45 percent of their total income on food, making them particularly vulnerable to such price shocks.

Households have adopted a range of coping mechanisms, including reduced food intake, day-to-day purchasing, the sale of personal assets, and, in some cases, the sale of aid items to cover essential expenses.

Beyond immediate economic strain, reduced access to adequate food and basic goods has contributed to deteriorating living conditions and increased pressure on already fragile households.

ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT

The US and Israel attacks on oil depots, refineries, and certain port facilities extended the impact of war beyond military and economic domains, creating a visible environmental and public health crisis within Iran.

The most immediate and visible environmental impact has been observed in Tehran. Following attacks on oil storage facilities and fuel infrastructure in Shahrān, Aghdasieh, Fardis, and other areas around Tehran and Karaj, large volumes of smoke and byproducts from burning petroleum entered the capital's air. Reports described darkened skies, widespread soot deposition, and even dark-colored precipitation— referred to in media accounts as “black rain”. These observations indicate that pollution extended beyond the immediate strike locations and dispersed across densely populated urban areas.

The combustion of petroleum releases a mixture of fine particulate matter, carbon soot, and toxic compounds into the air. Under such conditions, air pollution becomes both an immediate public health concern and a longer-term environmental hazard, as some of these substances settle onto buildings, streets, and soil. Local authorities' advised residents to use protective masks.

Speaking to HRA, a 54-year-old general surgeon working in Tehran said, “During the period following the strikes on fuel depots, even in our hospital, which is not specialized in respiratory care, we observed a noticeable number of patients presenting with breathing difficulties, persistent coughing, and signs of airway irritation.”

A second major consequence is the contamination of soil and surface water around impact and fire zones. When oil storage facilities or fuel tanks burn, unburned or partially burned petroleum products, combined with firefighting water, ash, and chemical residues, are transferred into the ground and surface runoff systems. In urban environments, this can lead to pollutants entering drainage systems, canals, and eventually contributing to localized cycles of soil and water contamination. This pattern was documented in environmental assessments of the 1991 Gulf War, where oil fires and spills caused long-lasting damage to coastal and marine ecosystems.

The impacts of severe air pollution, the deposition of petroleum-related contaminants across urban areas, and the risk of localized soil and water contamination underscore the broader human cost of attacks on industrial and energy-related infrastructure.

CHILDREN

HRA's independent documentation verified the deaths of 307 children and injury to 2,213 as a result of US/Israeli airstrikes between 28 February and 8 April.

Children have been among the most heavily affected civilians, with casualty figures indicating that approximately one in seven civilian deaths has been a child. Many of these deaths have occurred in locations where children should be safest – at home, school, and while playing with friends. In addition to the 108 damaged educational facilities and overwhelming attacks on residential homes documented by HRA, 17 sports complexes, 12 parks, 3 swimming pools, 6 gyms and 2 stadiums also sustained damage.

Beyond those injured and killed, many more children are affected by the lived experience of violence, fear and loss. Damage to schools and essential infrastructure, such as healthcare facilities, has disrupted access to education and the basic services that children rely on for their survival and wellbeing.

The war also led to an alarming resurgence in child recruitment by the IRGC. As reflected above (see Failure by the Defending Party (Iran) to Protect Civilians), HRA found evidence of children being widely deployed at checkpoints and in other support functions across multiple cities. “They go to the local mosque every day, and from there they get assigned a task— one day they’re at a checkpoint, another day they’re at a government march holding speakers, and sometimes they help with serving people. Their family encourages them to do this.”

-An informed citizen

The recruitment and use of children is a grave violation of their rights and exposes them to significant risks of injury and death, particularly as checkpoints have been repeatedly targeted in airstrikes. The killing of 11-year-old Alireza Jafari while present at a Basij checkpoint illustrates the lethal consequences of placing children in proximity to military objectives. On April 10, HRA published a statement to this regard, A Ceasefire Does Not Shield Children from the IRGC’s Unlawful Recruitment Practices.

Increasing numbers of children were also separated from caregivers or orphaned during the conflict, exposing them to numerous protection concerns and risks to their wellbeing. Damage to residential care facilities, which host unaccompanied children and are managed by Iran’s State Welfare Organization, reportedly led to casualties and forced the relocation of 57 such centers. In one attack on 30 March in Ferdis, Alborz Province, An orphanage on the verge of being established was hit, killing 2 civilians and injuring 5 others.

In response, a temporary emergency initiative was initiated to place unaccompanied or orphaned children with family-based care. Due to the urgency, placements were expedited and likely without completing standard judicial procedures. While intended to provide immediate protection, such emergency measures raise concerns regarding oversight and child safeguarding, including potential risks of exploitation and inadequate care.

Children were widely used, particularly by the Basij Organization, for propaganda activities or for staffing checkpoints.

THE ELDERLY AND SICK

Elderly individuals and those with chronic illnesses faced heightened risks during and after the conflict, particularly where mobility constraints prevented relocation.

One elderly individual described the situation:

“I had no way to leave and no one to help me. Most days I lived with anxiety, not knowing what would happen if my condition worsened.”

Attacks on oil and industrial sites contributed to sustained air pollution, exacerbating respiratory conditions and increasing the need for medical care. For many, limited mobility, reliance on medical equipment, and lack of support systems meant remaining in affected areas, leading to deteriorating health outcomes.

Disruptions to electricity and healthcare access further compounded these risks. Patients dependent on home-based medical equipment, including oxygen concentrators, were particularly vulnerable to power outages.

Elderly individuals, especially those living alone, also faced difficulties accessing medication, basic services, and support networks, increasing both physical and psychological strain.

ACCESS TO MEDICINE

The armed conflict triggered a severe crisis in access to medicine in Iran, driven by supply chain interruptions, rising import costs, damage to infrastructure, and pre-existing structural vulnerabilities. Disruptions to shipping routes, air transport, and domestic distribution delayed imports of medicines and pharmaceutical raw materials, while attacks affecting transportation routes and further constrained supply. Conflict-related impacts to cold chain systems raised additional risks for temperature-sensitive medicines.

These disruptions contributed to shortages of essential medicines, including insulin, chemotherapy drugs, painkillers, and cardiovascular medications, while prices of some medicines reportedly rose dramatically, in some cases by several hundred percent. The price of metformin, which was about 170,000 tomans before the war, reached around 450,000 tomans during the conflict. Even where medicines remained available, affordability became a major barrier, particularly for low-income households and people with chronic illnesses.

Hospitals also reported shortages of vital medicines and diagnostic supplies, affecting continuity of care. For many patients, the crisis was not only economic but directly threatened health and survival, illustrating how conflict-related damage and broader structural pressures combined to undermine access to essential healthcare.

MINORITY GROUPS

Minority groups in Iran, including ethnic and religious minorities, Afghan migrants, and women, experience the impacts of conflict through the lens of longstanding structural discrimination and marginalization. These dynamics shape both their exposure to harm and their access to protection.

Ethnic and religious minorities face deeply entrenched legal, economic, and political exclusion. Many also live in border regions that are more heavily militarized, increasing their exposure to conflict and related security operations.

Women are also deeply affected by conflict. Existing legal and social constraints often intensify in periods of instability, alongside increased economic insecurity and restrictions on movement. Women often bear additional burdens, including caring for injured family members or navigating the loss of primary income earners.

Notably, Iran hosts several million Afghans, including approximately 750,000 registered refugees and a much larger population that is undocumented or living in refugee-like conditions. Many already face legal, economic, and social constraints, which are compounded during conflict by heightened security risks and domestic repression.

Disruptions to livelihoods, including the suspension of daily wage work in sectors such as construction, have left many without income. Banking disruptions, rising costs, and communication outages further limit their ability to support themselves and maintain contact with family members, many of whom depend on remittances. Migrants face restricted mobility and limited access to essential services, including transportation, shelter, and healthcare. Ongoing displacement has disproportionately affected those without documentation or support networks, increasing the risks of homelessness and exclusion.

LABORERS

Workers, particularly those engaged in industrial, construction, service, and informal labor, have emerged as one of the most vulnerable groups, facing both direct and indirect consequences of the conflict.

Industrial and commercial sites and factories have been direct targets of attack, as detailed above, resulting in the death or injury of workers.

Damage to industrial sites, supply chain disruptions, and operational uncertainty have led to factory closures and suspended activities. This has rapidly evolved into a livelihood crisis, with reports of withheld wages, unpaid leave, and limited access to legal recourse.

Pre-existing gaps between wages and the cost of living have widened further due to inflation, currency depreciation, and rising prices of essential goods. The United Nations estimates that the conflict will push 3.5–4.1 million people below the poverty line and up to 304,000 people into extreme poverty. Informal and contract workers (39% of the workforce) are disproportionately affected, often losing employment without access to protections or support.

Internet disruptions have also eliminated income for workers dependent on digital platforms.

CONSCRIPTS

Forced conscription in Iran is widespread and strictly enforced. Military service of one to two years is mandatory for all men at age 18, although a number of exemptions exist.

The majority of conscripts are assigned to non-combat roles, including at guard posts, checkpoints, or support units. These positions nonetheless expose them to significant risk, particularly in the context of recent attacks by US or Israeli forces. As a result, a number of conscripts have been killed or injured.

A family member of a conscript killed in recent attacks told HRA:

“Our child went to complete his mandatory service, not to fight in a war. He had no choice, but in the end, he lost his life there.”

Traditional interpretations of IHL consider members of the armed forces as lawful military targets based on their status, regardless of whether they are directly engaged in combat. This includes conscripts, who lose their civilian protection from direct attack for the duration of their service, even when assigned to administrative or support roles.

However, this approach has been subject to ongoing legal debate. More recent interpretations influenced by the International Committee of the Red Cross’ concept of ‘continuous combat function’, emphasize a function-based analysis, in which targetability depends on an individual’s direct participation in hostilities. Under this view, the status of conscripts performing purely administrative or support roles presents a more ambiguous case and complex legal question.

In practice, most states continue to apply status-based targeting. As a result, Iranians subjected to mandatory military service, including those in non-combat roles, remain in a particularly precarious position.

DOMESTIC AND INTERNATIONAL RESPONSES

DOMESTIC REACTIONS

Domestic reactions reflected a range of political, civil society, religious, and public responses, many centered on the humanitarian consequences of the conflict, the protection of civilians, and concern over the war’s domestic repercussions, including heightened repression and restrictions on rights.

POLITICAL AND PUBLIC RESPONSES

Political reactions within Iran were not uniform. Government officials, such as Foreign Affairs Minister Abbas Aragchi, emphasized Iran's sovereignty and right to self-defense. Some political figures inside the country, such as Mostafa Tajzadeh, called for de-escalation and a return to diplomacy, warning of the war's consequences for civilians and national infrastructure.

CIVIL SOCIETY AND SOCIAL RESPONSES

Civil society responses strongly emphasized civilian protection and humanitarian concerns. More than 561 Iranian non-governmental organizations issued a joint statement condemning attacks on civilians and vital infrastructure. Sixty-one political and civil activists, including Mohsen Kadivar and Mohammadreza Nikfar, likewise warned against escalation and called for an end to the war.

Some domestic reactions focused on raising alarm over the expanded internal repression in the context of the war, including concern over the internet shutdown, pressure on civil activists, and the vulnerability of prisoners and other at-risk groups under wartime conditions.

RELIGIOUS AND COMMUNITY RESPONSES

Religious and community leaders also responded publicly. 1,170 Sunni religious scholars from Hormozgan issued a collective statement condemning the attacks and calling for unity, while Molavi Abdolhamid and Younes Hamami Lalehzar publicly expressed concern for civilians and urged restraint.

Public acts of solidarity and symbolic resistance also emerged, including citizens and cultural heritage activists in Isfahan forming a human chain around the Chehel Sotoun Palace Museum following damage to historical sites.

Taken together, domestic reactions reflected not only opposition to the human costs of the war, but also concern over how the conflict was deepening existing pressures on rights and civic space inside Iran.

INTERNATIONAL REACTIONS

Governments, UN bodies, and international organizations broadly converged around several themes: concern over the legality of the attacks, including under the prohibition on the use of force; alarm over civilian casualties and damage to schools, hospitals, cultural heritage, and vital infrastructure; and repeated calls for de-escalation and a return to diplomacy.

UNITED NATIONS AND HUMANITARIAN INSTITUTIONS

At the United Nations, senior officials and specialized agencies warned of escalating humanitarian consequences and called for protection of civilians and compliance with international law. UN human rights experts, humanitarian agencies, and organizations including the International Committee of the Red Cross, World Health Organization, UNICEF, and UNESCO raised concerns over attacks affecting health care, children, cultural heritage, and essential infrastructure, while calling for restraint and accountability.

STATE RESPONSES

A number of governments adopted explicit positions condemning or criticizing the attacks. Officials from China called them a violation of Iran's sovereignty. Russia sharply criticized attacks as an attempt to dominate Iran's energy resources, and warned of the dangerous consequences of attacks near nuclear facilities. Spain, Brazil, Colombia, and Mexico emphasized de-escalation, ceasefire, and diplomatic resolution. Regional actors including Turkey, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, and Egypt similarly stressed preventing expansion of the conflict and returning to dialogue.

In Europe, responses generally emphasized de-escalation while balancing broader security concerns. Officials from Germany and France warned of the dangers of regional destabilization and stressed diplomatic solutions, while the European Union similarly called for restraint while continuing broader pressure and sanctions policies toward Iran.

These reactions underscored that the conflict was viewed not as an isolated military confrontation, but as a threat to broader regional and global stability.

HUMAN RIGHTS, ACADEMIC, AND CIVIL SOCIETY RESPONSES

Human rights organizations, UN experts, humanitarian actors, and academic groups increasingly framed the conflict through legal and protection concerns, including possible violations of international law, risks to civilians and protected infrastructure, and the need for accountability.

Organizations including Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch called for investigations into attacks affecting civilians and civilian objects. Independent UN experts and more than 100 international law scholars described the war as a violation of the UN charter and highlighted the potential instances of war crimes.

Academic communities also mobilized, with hundreds of scholars and public intellectuals issuing collective statements warning about attacks on scientific and educational infrastructure and the broader implications for human development.

Taken together, international reactions reflected broad concern not only over immediate civilian harm, but over the wider legal, humanitarian, environmental, and geopolitical consequences of the war. While positions varied in emphasis and political framing, a common thread across responses was the urgency of halting hostilities and preventing further harm to civilians.

ANNEX 1: WEAPONS

HRA utilized an internal weapons specialist, alongside the Airwars’ Open Source Munitions Portal (OSMP) to examine the weapons used throughout the conflict. While the scope of this report deals with the impact of US and Israeli hostilities, it should be noted that HRA has verified the use of, for example, the Chinese-made Wing Loong drone, which are not operated by the US, or Israel but whose remnants have been identified.

It should also be noted that Iranian media has regularly misidentified or misattributed munitions and remnants, including identifying downed missiles as drones, or identifying Iranian munition remnants as US or Israeli. HRA documented a wide range of US and Israeli munitions and platforms being used to conduct attacks, or support operations. Predominantly, the use of MK-80 series bombs with JDAM guidance kits, and long-range missiles such as the Tomahawk and JASSM has been documented, including in densely populated areas. A non-exhaustive list can be found below.

Detailed list of documented weapons and platforms:

ANNEX 4: HRA GROUND AND OPEN SOURCES MEDIA DOCUMENTATION

The following video compilation has been prepared as a supplementary visual archive to this report. The footage consolidates 1,665 documented video reports related to US and Israeli military operations in Iran between 28 February and 8 April 2026. The materials presented in this annex have been collected from HRA ground sources as well as verified open sources throughout the conflicts and compiled together into a single chronological collection.

The video archive is intended to provide additional visual context regarding the scale of hostilities, patterns of attacks, damage to civilian infrastructure, and the broader humanitarian impact documented throughout this report. Due to the intensity of the conflict and the nature of the incidents recorded, some footage may contain graphic or disturbing scenes.

The compilation has been published separately through YouTube and HRA's official media platforms.
